NAZIS REPORT THERMOPYLAE BATTLE WON

British Are Withdrawing From Athens; May Make Crete Base For Defense

By UNITED PRESS

The Greek campaign seemed in its final hours today but the prospect of new, immediate and powerful American aid to Britain—possibly North Atlantic convoys—and her democratic allies in large measure offset allied military reverses.

The German high command reported once again a battle at Thermopylae had been won by encircling tactics which apparently flanked the British last-man defense from the rear.

The same maneuver was used by Xerxes and his Persians when they found themselves unable to smash through the pass held by Leonidas and his 300 Spartans in 480 B. C. Xerxes cut across the mountains and fell on the Spartans from the rear, wiping out the defenders.

The British middle east command confirmed the loss of Thermopylae, reporting that a further withdrawal had been made in Greece after inflicting severe casualties upon the German units.

How close the German spear now may be to Athens was not revealed. Some Italian reports claimed the Nazis were on the outskirts of the Greek capital and there was a feeling in Berlin that the entry might be made at any time.

It was clear the fall of the city was being held off only by the desperate efforts of allied rear guards who apparently had orders to fight to the last to protect the evacuation of as many British and Greek troops as possible.

The Athens radio entered a phase familiar to those who had listened by air to the last hours of Warsaw. It stayed on the air, broadcasting military music, patriotic appeals and occasional general reports on what it called the "final and decisive battle" now underway.

Reports from Axis sources and from London indicated that the bulk of the British Imperials are being withdrawn to Crete where King George II and the Greek government is established. It appeared the British and Greeks will attempt to maintain their stand on this large island 70 miles off the Greek coast.

With the A Division of men's teams filled, league officers reported there is room in the B division for one more team.

One vacancy also exists in the women's division of the league where the Caldor Girls and the Legionettes have been joined by an aggregation sponsored by Lutz Motor Sales.

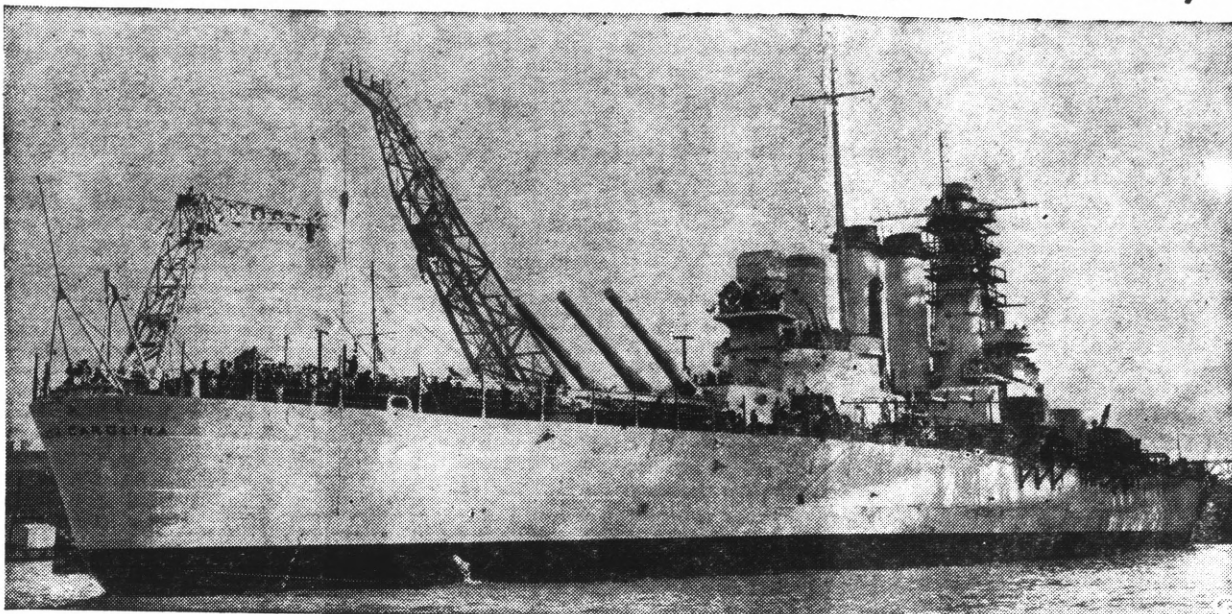

The two men's divisions are intended to include six clubs each, while the women's division will hope to include four clubs.

U. S. Is "Doing Something" To Oppose Axis In Greenland

Roosevelt Tells Press Conference He Hopes There Will Be No More Acts Of Aggression In North Atlantic Island; Sea Patrol Extended

WASHINGTON, (IP)—President Roosevelt said today Greenland may be occupied in part by the Axis, and this country is doing something to counteract the Axis there.

The President said he did not know for certain whether Axis forces were in Greenland.

Asked whether anything is being done by this country, he replied it was being done.

He revealed the neutrality patrol established after the outbreak of war is being extended and will be extended to all of the seven seas if necessary for the protection of the western hemisphere.

The President flatly denied the government had an idea of instituting convoys.

The President said conveying involved the escorting of merchant ships in a group to protect them from attack. Patrols, he said, involve reconnaissance over certain areas of the oceans to find out if any aggressive ships might be coming into the western hemisphere.

The President said that in 1939 the areas of the Greenland in the Atlantic were nearer to these shores than now, because there did not seem to be any danger of attack on Bermuda, Greenland, Newfoundland, Trinidad or Brazil.

New developments, the President continued, show the danger of attack is now greater.

And, he continued in discussing the waters between Greenland and Newfoundland, the United States has an obligation under the Monroe Doctrine to protect Canada against attack by any power outside of the western hemisphere.

Mr. Roosevelt also pointed out the United States now has an interest in bases acquired from Britain within the year.

Asked whether the expansion of the patrol would not provide what one reported described as a "nice, safe sea road" to Greenland, the President added that he hoped that the route to Greenland would be safe.

Then he added he hoped there would be no more acts of aggression in Greenland. It was at this point that he said he thought the Axis already may be in Greenland.

He said he did not believe the Axis effort in Greenland was a fifth column activity, implying that it was more direct than that.

Colfax at Lincoln; North Sacramento at Auburn; Roseville Merchants in Placerville; Folsom vs Wolf and Royer at Roseville.

The third game for the Bartlets in their Placer-Nevada League schedule and their first under the management of Frank "Bud" Goodin is on the slate for Sunday afternoon at Marcus P. Bennett, Jr., Memorial Park.

The visitors are the Roseville Merchants, used by the strong Folsom aggregation last week by the narrow count of 9 to 8.

The Merchants will be plenty tough, for they won the league opener from North Sacramento, 4 to 0, and last week the North Sacramento took it out on the Bartlets, 9 to 5.

Goodin agreed to accept the Bartlett management during the week after Walter Butts resigned as manager. The new boss of the Bartlets had little to say in the way of promises of accomplishment and indicated he hopes the fans will have something nice to talk about, based on the Bartlett performances.

NEW ANTI-TANK WEAPON HAS BEEN DEVELOPED BY ARMY

WASHINGTON, (IP)—The army is developing a new secret weapon which some ordnance officers are calling the "panzer killer."

The announcement follows recent statements by military experts that the best way to stop armored divisions is with a tank "chaser" or "destroyer." Present anti-tank guns, of which the 37 mm. high velocity gun is the newest, are towed by motorized equipment and are not protected from strafing. They also lack the power to stop big heavily-armored tanks.

FBI REPORTED PROBING "UNDERGROUND" ESCAPE LINE

NEW YORK, (IP)—The New York Daily News said agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation were "probing evidence of an American-financed 'underground railway' for the escape of German war prisoners from Canada."

The News said investigation of the "escape mechanism, controlled from a headquarters in Detroit," was spurred by the revelation that Baron Franz Von Werra, German airman who escaped to this country from Canada, had fled to Peru after jumping bail totaling $15,000.

CAPACITY CROWD DELIGHTED WITH INITIAL CONCERT OF PHILHARMONIC ORCHESTRA

Program Of Five Numbers Presented Under Direction Of Evelyne Farrelle With Frank Dames As Concertmaster

The publicity calling attention to the initial concert of the Placerville Philharmonic Orchestra said that the interest shown by the public in the first appearance would guide the group in its plans for next season.

Well, the orchestra made its first public appearance at the Shakespeare Club auditorium Thursday evening, and judged by the "interest shown by the public" there will be ample opportunity next season for the people of El Dorado County to hear the Philharmonic Orchestra again.

The seats of the auditorium were filled and there were people standing around the edge of the hall. It was an appreciative audience and Evelyne Farrelle, conductor, and the members of the orchestra were deserving of the enthusiastic response which greeted their program.

Vocal soloist of the evening was Esther Hopkins.

Frank Dames, well-known El Dorado County violinist, was the concertmaster.

The program, in addition to the several vocal offerings, included "The Golden Scepture Overture," by R. Schlegel; the "Andante" from the "Surprise Symphony," by Haydn; "Intermezzo Russe," by Theo Franke; "La Cinquantaine," by Gabriel Marie; and arrangements from Balfe's "The Bohemian Girl."

Comments by the conductor before each number proved of great value to those not so familiar with the offerings in their interpretation of what the composers of the various numbers intended for their music to convey.

The Placerville Philharmonic Orchestra is a voluntary civic group of musicians of the county who, last Fall, associated themselves together as a result of their mutual interest in orchestral harmony. Under Mrs. Farrelle's direction they have been practicing and rehearsing regularly through the past winter and the Thursday evening appearance is, for them, an important milestone of achievement which must come to them, at least to some.

CONSTRUCTION WORKERS STRIKE FOR WAGES AT SAN DIEGO

SAN DIEGO, (IP)—Two thousand AFL construction workers struck for higher wages today, halting work on two big Navy housing projects costing a total of $3,500,000.

Electricians, painters, floor-layers and roofers walked out on projects at the navy destroyer base and at the naval training station. They demanded pay raises from the Simpson Construction Co., the contractors, ranging from 75 cents to $1 a day.

K. G. Bitter, secretary of the AFL labor council, said union leaders anticipated a walkout of 15,000 or more workers this morning, but that for the time, at least, the strike was being confined to the Simpson jobs.

CHAPTER XIX

Of course a girl can't kid herself very long if things go wrong. Female plumbing is just one big burglar alarm. But I cosied myself thinking maybe I was shot by too much nerve strain at the office, or I'd got a chill, all those things. Then one night I was working late with Delphine, feeling terrible. She said let's take a breathing spell. It turned out to be a fainting spell. I didn't know it till I came to smelling cologne and she looked at me sort of queer. She probably guessed right then, even before I did. I wouldn't put it past her. She was a grand sport, rode me home in a taxi, told me to take a day off and go see a doctor.

I was nervous going to the doctor. He wasn't very helpful, gave me some pills and stuff.

That doctor called me "Mrs. Foyle" when I went out. That made me sore, but I knew it meant he was perfectly damn sure. So was I.

It's funny, that feeling "but things like this don't happen to me." Oh

"Gino asked if I'd have a Strega on the house." (Eduardo Ciannelli as Gino, the speak-easy proprietor; Ginger Rogers as Kitty Foyle)

I know about fright and misery and despair and what makes poor kids open the window too wide I walked round that Verdi statue near my room and wondered if the Ansonia was high enough to jump off of. It didn't make sense, it's just because you feel so sick and lonely. I envied old bums sitting on benches that had nothing to worry about but a cup of coffee.

I went and had myself a small brandy at a speak I knew over on Amsterdam Avenue, and all of a sudden I saw the right side of it. I was proud. This would solve everything. I wanted to write Wyn. How pleased he would be, I'd go away somewhere and take care of that baby, it would really be Wyn Strafford the Seventh, and I couldn't ever be lonely again. I was creating something, I was part of the world. I could go down South, Wyn could afford it and he'd be proud too and come and see me sometimes.

I wouldn't need to wait long to tell him about it, he was coming over on Friday. I was fixing to wear that Irish lace collar he got me because he said he was proud of it. I'd have a Strega on the house while I was waiting, but I didn't feel like drinking, anyhow not that. I had some ginger ale, I knew that would surprise Wyn, and I would say "I don't want it to grow up a dipso." He would say "what grow up a dipso?" Then I'd tell him.

Gino laid an evening paper on the table. It was just behind the to get out. Talk slow now, something you just thought of.

"Jonny, I'm sorry, I've got to go. I've got an appointment I can't duck. Don't tell Mr. Strafford I was here. I'll go out of town on business. I can't see him today. Give him a big drink. Jonny, so he won't worry. Give him a big one. Keep him at the bar where he'll talk to people. Tell him I'm all right, I'm fine. I've just got some important business."

I could feel my teeth trying to chatter but I threw all my Irish into it and said it slow. Of course Gino knew something was wrong, but he thought it was just a lover's quarrel, which Italians practically invented. Anyhow I had to trust him. I put down a dollar for the ginger ale and didn't wait for change. It was a black night, I went out of there like the witch on the broomstick.

I knew I better act before I could stop to think. I wouldn't go back to my room because Wyn might follow me there. I took a cab right to Delphine's apartment.

All she said at first was, "I guess it was my fault, Keety, to let you wear the Olympia. It is too subtle for the young."

After dinner I guess she figured I was scared to go back to the rooming house for fear I'd run into Wyn. So she told me to phone the landlady I had to go out of town for business and sent her maid round there to pack my bag. She gave me such a hooker of brandy, I went right to sleep in her guest room, as I faded I could hear her talking French over the phone.

The maid brought me coffee in bed next morning. I was just thinking I better make a run for the office, when Delphine came in, dressed for work. She handed me a card on which she had written a name and address.

"Tout s'arrange," she said, her French way of saying O. K. "You go down and see these doctors. I have telephoned an appointment for you. I get his name from friends who say he has the high-class trade. I wouldn't have guessed I'd be

The Early Church Meeting Human Needs

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for April 27 is Acts 4:32-7-60, the Golden Text being Acts 4:32. "And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and soul.")

THE SPIRIT of the early church was a fine and lovely thing. All the members loved one another, and shared what they had with one another. No one spoke of his own possessions, but "they had all things in common." None of the believers were in need, for these that owned property sold it and gave to the more needy brothers according to their needs.

As a result, with imperfect man, however, there were those among them who cheated and lied. Such were Ananias and his wife, Sapphira. They, too, sold their possessions, but instead of laying the proceeds at the feet of the apostles as the others had done, they kept back some of it. When Ananias was questioned by Peter as to why he had given all, he said he had, but Peter knew he lied, and said, "Ananias, why hath Satan filled thine heart to lie to the Holy Ghost and to keep back part of the price of the land?"

A great fear fell on Ananias when he heard this question, and he fell down at the apostle's feet and died, and was carried out by four young men and buried. Three hours later Sapphira, not knowing what had happened to her husband, came in and Peter asked her about the money, if that was all they received. She, too, said it was, and Peter accused her of conspiring with her husband to cheat them. At that she fell down at his feet and died, as her husband had, and the same young men carried her out and buried her beside her husband.

Many Are Healed

Multitudes of men and women joined the band of believers on the Lord Jesus Christ, and they brought their sick, those afflicted in body and mind, to be healed by the apostles. If they could not reach the apostles, they tried to lay those afflicted so that Peter's shadow would fall upon them, thinking that even his shadow would heal them.

Then the high priest rose up, and all they that were with him (which is the sect of the Sadducees), and were filled with indignation, and laid hands on the apostles, and put them in the common prison. But the angel of the Lord by night opened the prison doors and brought them forth.

You can imagine the consternation of the high priests when their guards announced that although the prison was still locked, the apostles had gone, and were, moreover, at that moment teaching in the temple.

Sending the captain and officers to the temple they took the apostles, but without violence, for they were afraid of what the common people might do, and brought them to court and asked them why they were preaching in defiance of their orders. The answer was: "We ought to obey God rather than man."

They further expounded their message, and when they had finished speaking, the high priests took counsel how to slay them. However, a man named Gamaliel stood up and addressed them. He was a learned doctor of the law. He sent the apostles aside and warned the high priests against any violence. He reminded them that other men had risen and taught various doctrines and gathered disciples, but all had been slain or otherwise dispersed, and he ended his address by saying, "Refrain from these men, and let them alone, for if this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to naught; but if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it: lest haply ye be found even to fight against God."

They agreed to his views, beating the disciples and letting them go. And the apostles went home, rejoicing that they were considered worthy to suffer shame for His name.

Now the Grecian Jews complained about this time that their widows were not receiving their right share of the charity, so the apostles appointed seven men to right this injustice. Among them was Stephen, who was full of faith and power.

His wisdom and the spirit in which Stephen spoke was irresistible, so the high priests bribed men to say that he blasphemed, and brought him to council. False witnesses testified against him, but all those who sat in the council chamber saw his face "as it had been the face of an angel."

The chief priest asked Stephen if the things that were testified against him were so, and he gave the most remarkable sermon and one of the longest recorded in the book of Acts. He reminded them of the history of the Jews; how they had always rebelled against God and even set up idols to worship, and killed those whom God had sent to them. When he had finished the officials of the church "were cut to the heart, and they gnashed on him with their teeth."

With one accord they rushed upon him and stoned him to death, the first martyr. Stephen looked up steadfastly into heaven and saw the glory of God and Jesus standing on the right hand of God.

"He kneeled down, and cried with a loud voice, Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. And when he had said this, he fell asleep."

A woman writer is receiving $175,000 for the movie rights to her yet-unpublished novel. The films certainly gave a pretty penny for her thoughts.

An eastern zoo has a bird which, when shot, promptly faints. Sounds like the dove of peace.

Frenchmen can now buy a new suit of clothes, but first they must trade in two old ones. Maybe 40,000,000 Frenchmen can't be wrong, but if this keeps up they'll soon be nudists!

A Recruit For Safety

Governor Culbert Olson of California, enthusiastic crusader for safety, is shown enrolling Jim Wilson in the Ford Good Drivers League, which was organized by Edsel Ford to promote safe driving by the nation's youth. Jim is a high school sophomore in Sacramento. By enrolling in the league, he becomes eligible to compete for one of the 98 university scholarships—49 for girls and 49 for boys—offered by Mr. Ford to winners of safe driving tests to be held in each state with national finals at Dearborn, Michigan, in August. "The stimulus of the Ford scholarships will focus attention on good driving in schools all over the country," said Governor Olson. "Students and their parents will have a renewed interest in highway safety, which is certain to be an important factor in reducing the appalling toll of traffic accidents."

Umpires Err But Call 'Em As They See 'Em

By HANK TOWNE

As I said before, baseball umpires are supposed to come in for their share of squawks. But on the whole we believe they honestly call the plays as they see them, and by the law of something-or-other they can't be perfect—even as you and I. Anyhow, what I wish to say is, that Sam Hern, according to some keen observers, missed a dilly Sunday when he apparently lost track of the ball. It was when Bob Clark knocked a slow roller in the direction of "between pitcher's box and first." Three or four North Sac. infielders hustled after it with nobody covering first and resulted in about four players, including Clark charging for the bag. Bob and one opposing player reached the plate about the same time but the third man to spike the sack had the ball. But it's o. k. Sam, you probably called it as you saw it.

Paid attendance last Sunday was somewhere around 150—about 40 off the gate for the season's opener. We'll stick our chin out and predict a victory for the Barts this Sunday (limited amount of bets accepted) and a better crowd than last week, with an increase coming next week.

And speaking of attendance, we'd like to wager that with a little advance publicity on the feature attraction such as billed at the last meeting of the city council, the crowd would make a creditable impression at Bennett Park. (We are already dickering for the ticket and tomato concession).

BEHIND THE SCENES IN BUSINESS

BY JOHN CRADDOCK

BUSINESS—From all sides come indications that the expansion of wage rates throughout the industrial scene has really got underway. It's the old supply-and-demand law. The fact that the defense drive has greatly increased the competition for skilled labor's main reason why, generally, wage disputes are being settled with increases in pay and, in addition, other pay increases are being granted although much dispute has been foreseen several months ago when the "quit rate" of workers voluntarily leaving one job to go to another in similar field began rising sharply. Next question is how are "the rest of us" affected? Biggest group is composed of consumers who do not generally share in the higher wages. Between them, these two groups must pay for the increases—the first through paying higher prices on goods whose prices can be raised; the second, through having to take reduced profits in cases where prices cannot be upped sufficiently to match rising wage costs. Eventually—maybe—all income goes up, and prices do the same. Meanwhile the skilled worker segment of the population is the main gainer.

ECONOMY ENGINEER—Passing virtually unnoticed in Los Angeles ship news columns last week was a note that James P. Growdon, chief hydraulic engineer for Aluminum Company of America, had sailed for Hawaii. But behind this note was a story of civilian contribution to the defense program. Summoned by the U. S. Navy last November to lend technical assistance in the building of new underground oil storage facilities for fueling the Pacific fleet at Pearl Harbor, T. H. Growdon made the flying round trip from Pittsburgh in nine days, spending seven daylight days at the Hawaiian base. Recommendations he made improved the efficiency of the project, speeded its completion and saved the Navy an estimated $2,000,000. Growdon, who, as a major in the 4th engineers during the first world war, received the Croix de Guerre and the Distinguished Service Cross for engineering feats while under heavy German fire, is now visiting Pearl Harbor again at the request of the Navy to lend a helping hand, despite urgent need for his services at home in carrying out his company's far-flung defense expansion program.

WHENCE $3,500,000,000? — The record-breaking $3,500,000,000 revenue bill for 1941 agreed on by the Administration and key congressional leaders came as a wallop to most "official circles" in Washington, where a mere two billion had been mentioned as likely. Even so, congressional reaction was mild and capital feeling is the bill will be endorsed by both congress and the country. Best-informed guessing as to where the money will come from has it that: Normal rate on individual income taxes upper from 4 per cent to 5 or 6; elimination of "earned income" credit; further lowering the exemptions for dependents, especially on the surtax end, and general increase of surtax rates. On corporation taxes, a raise from 24 to 30 per cent, other changes having the effect of reducing credits, such as those for invested capital, and earnings. Third source would be excise taxes, with general increases, and special increases of liquor, gasoline, tobacco, autos, radios and refrigerators, maybe new taxes on soft drinks, other "luxuries."

AVIATION EDUCATION—All the nation's public schools will offer aviation training, and America may become the most air-minded nation in the world, if a program now being launched achieves the success envisioned by a committee of three well-known businessmen—John A. Brown, president of Socony-Vacuum Oil, Cornelius V. Whitney, the chairman of Pan American Airways, and Laurence S. Rockefeller. They have worked out a plan to raise $100,000 from business and private individuals, to inaugurate a program of aviation training in public schools, sponsored by Air Youth of America, a national group. Fully supported by federal government agencies controlling aviation, the plan would include visits by leaders of the air youth organization to every state capital to enlist the support of public officials. Of the proposal, Whitney says: "Only a huge plan such as this can help America to be strong in the air and a leader in the aeronautical sciences in the future. We are recommending building and operation of model planes in every elementary school, and soaring instruction in all high schools."

THINGS TO WATCH FOR—A general rash of household gadgets made in the form of military objects: two early birds in this line are a perfume atomizer in the shape of a miniature cannon made of colored plastic, and a cocktail shaker of brass which rests in a wooden frame at an angle so that it looks very much like a siege gun. . . . a line of canned goods which heat themselves with no fire—by means of a chemical between the double walls of the can—started with just beans and spaghetti, soon will be available with stew and hash. New motorcycles made for the army by "Indian," with a scabbard built into the handlebar to hold a sub-machine gun . . . more colored shorts for men—a du Pont survey finds that in 1940, for the first time more colored shirts were sold than the classic white.

THE Book Mark

By JANE VOILES

An old lady asked a member of the London demolition squad "What made that large hole in the road—was it a bomb?" "No, lady," replied a cockney from the depth of the crater, "mice!" This attitude is really typical of England's attitude today, says Phyllis Bottome in her book "Mansion House of Liberty."

After seeing a preview of the film made from her book, "The Mortal Storm," Miss Bottome returned to England to see what was happening to her country in body and in spirit. "Mansion House of Liberty," is the result of her observations.

Now that security is an outworn commodity in England, the mere act of keeping oneself and one's neighbor alive has become enjoyable. In the upper classes the spirit of noblesse oblige asserts itself; in the lower classes courage and good will prevail even among those who have lost all of their outward possessions. Heroism is contagious.

In order to write about them intelligently, Miss Bottome slept in the different kinds of shelters. What are known as "safe shelters" are under concrete flooring or under well built houses. Anderson shelters made of steel and brick stand up against everything except a direct attack. Public surface shelters at the time of writing were still comfortless and dangerous. As an adventure, Miss Bottome discovered, living in a shelter was wonderful but as a habit, it might become pretty fatiguing.

The writer found English women matching their husbands for bravery. The teachers of all England have become maids-of-all work to humanity in general. Girls are employed as butchers and very good ones they are making. Housewives have enlisted in the nursing auxiliaries and in the evacuation service. In the latter, 97,000 women were enrolled. Debutantes and social butterflies have become ambulance drivers facing flames and explosions to care for the stricken and the dead.

The Royal Air Force has no tradition but Miss Bottome who saw it function declares that it is making history. The boys of the Force live in a kind of raw simplicity. They are almost always tired, cold and hungry, they never experience a feeling of security and yet a deep inner joy is forever bubbling out of them. Regardless of color, creed or station a deep sense of human brotherhood exists among these boys. Somehow this relationship epitomizes the very essence of what the war is doing for England. In this awakening of the English people class barriers are breaking down. Gradually the realization has come upon them that good manners come from the heart rather than from a classical education and that good breeding is found only where the feelings of others are considered.

This is on-the-spot history. You can almost hear the sound of the German planes herringboning over the towns as Miss Bottome describes the raids. She shows you towns facing danger without fear and she tells of less heroic places where there is no standing up to the foe. The city of Ramsgate was not one of the latter. In that city 2500 houses were destroyed in half an hour. Shortly after the staunch-hearted citizens began rebuilding.

Miss Bottome who is a student of psychiatry—remember her book "Private Worlds"—and her book of short stories, "Masks and Faces," beside "The Mortal Storm"—knows the value of writing with controlled emotions about her war torn country. While she writes with more restraint than has been exercised by some of the recent writers on England and the war, at the same time, she writes with white-hot ardor. What lies behind the curtain of the imminent future, no one knows. These are problems with no cut and dried solutions.

"Mansion House of Liberty" might be a commentary on the continuity of that ancient Saxon spirit that defies domination. An old chronicler expressed that feeling for all time in his description of the attitude of the warriors in the Battle of Maldon (this took place in the year 991): "The bolder be each heart. Each spirit sterner, Valor more. Now that our strength is less."
